The folks over at Dr. Web have once again come up with a fun and catchy little utility that helps keep your Windows PC secure by blocking those pesky pop-up ads. Yet more ads are continuously being created to pad the pockets of online marketers, and so we need to be able to find a way to prevent them from disturbing our peaceful existence. AdBlock Plus Pro v1.8.1 introduced us to the anti-ad extension manager, a collection of impressive filters that were designed to keep the ads from cluttering our media players and websites. Now a short while later, our friendly Dr. Web folks have just announced the availability of AdBlock Plus Pro v1.8.2. The update brings the previously mentioned extension manager up to speed with the latest version of AdBlock Plus Pro v1.8, introducing new features and enhancements as well as a brand new user interface that adds more features and visual appeal to the PC security software. One of the biggest improvements is that with this update, AdBlock Plus Pro's user interface is now just as smooth as the rest of the software, offering a cleaner and crisper look than before. As for the improvements and changes themselves, there are two notable changes worth mentioning, both of which come to your AdBlock Plus Pro's user interface. The first thing that you will notice in the updated user interface is the new thumbnail view for your extensions. The previous version of AdBlock Plus Pro only featured the extension manager, with no new features for the user interface. This version, though, features the extension manager at the bottom of the screen, and a nice crisp thumbnail view of each of your extensions. You also have the option to turn on a new feature called, 'Add to white list' (aa67ecbc25
