Mind Reader is an application that will help you with counting exercises and improve your memory. The goal is to count a set of numbers by choosing one number by one. The next several numbers will then appear depending on what number you initially chose. To see them, just tell if you see the number or not and then, choose a different number. For example, if you have 30 numbers on your screen and you choose to see the 6th number, the 6th number will appear on the 30 panel. To see the next number, say if you see it or not and repeat the process. If you see the number, just say if you see it or not and choose a different number, otherwise it will continue until you choose the last number. Once you finish to see all numbers, the application will stop. It is important to choose a number between and to not choose a sequence number that appears frequently on the screen. For example, if you choose the 5th, a pair of numbers, 5 and 6 will appear on the screen for quite a long time. The program will clear the display each time you finish the session and reset the counters. If you are not satisfied by the 7 numbers I have provided, you can use the application and see how you can play in order to get a different combination of numbers. Also, you can open a new tab to copy the numbers you wish to use and then, reset to play with them. Mind Reader Screenshots: File Size: 4MB. I asked this question before and I got many different answers, some were bad. Here is the question again. The main idea is to get the numbers from some files. I will be using the built in functions for this purpose. Question: What the function that can read the content of files on a BlackBerry device? I'm looking for something that can parse a file to get the lines that contains the numbers, for example, let's say I want to read the text of a file called "Number.txt" and get the lines that contains digits. I want to compare them with a table in the application and show the number when it is equal to one of the numbers in the table.
